Excerpt: . . . respect, or the other way Investigation Needed Now, gentlemen, I have this proposal to make. I do not put it in the form of a motion, simply in the form of a suggestion: Before seriously attempting to correct delays in the law, we have got to know what those delays are. All us lawyers have some pretty definite notion, but still if I were to ask any lawyer here what is the average time between the filing of a complaint and getting the case to issue, he would have a hard time telling you. These facts can be easily ascertained, and I make this proposal as worthy of this Club: That we employ somebody to take, well, say the last two volumes of the Supreme Court decisions and the last two volumes of the District Court of Appeals and arrange a chronology of the...
